“ When I was a little girl my Poppy would take me out on his dock and we would sit in camping chairs and fish all day. He had a minnow trap for bait and pulling up the little cage to see how many we got was always my favorite part, I loved looking at all of the different little fish. That time I spent on the water with him was one of the things that led me to have such an intense passion for the outdoors and marine biology. I will always remember and cherish the times I had with my Poppy, and will always be grateful for the ways that he enriched my life.
