“ So sorry to have read of the tragic loss of your Kevin.

I wish to share comfort from the Bible at this sad time.

The Bible teaches that one day in the near future our Creator, Jehovah God, by means of the ransom sacrifice of his son, Jesus, will reunite us with our dead loved ones by means of a resurrection right here on earth in paradise conditions that will be filled with peace, happiness, and perfect health for everyone. (John 5:28,29; Psalm 37:9-11,29; Isaiah 33:24)

As you read the above texts from your Bible, may the wonderful hope they give us, along with loving memories bring you a measure of comfort during this most difficult time.

There is much Bible-based comfort to be found on the website jw.org

“ I'm a big Kafka fan and I think Kevin would be too (if he wasn't I don't know, we didn't have the conversation) but this story is relevant and reminds me of him.

Franz Kafka, the story goes, encountered a little girl in the park where he went walking daily. She was crying. She had lost her doll and was desolate.

Kafka offered to help her look for the doll and arranged to meet her the next day at the same spot. Unable to find the doll he composed a letter from the doll and read it to her when they met.

"Please do not mourn me, I have gone on a trip to see the world. I will write you of my adventures." This was the beginning of many letters. When he and the little girl met he read her from these carefully composed letters the imagined adventures of the beloved doll. The little girl was comforted.

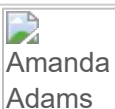

When the meetings came to an end Kafka presented her with a doll. She obviously looked different from the original doll. An attached letter explained: "My travels have changed me..."

Many years later, the now grown girl found a letter stuffed into an unnoticed crevice in the cherished replacement doll. In summary it said: "Every thing that you love, you will eventually lose, but in the end, love will return in a different form."

Kevin has left us way too soon, he would have been an amazing father. He would be the one to do something just like this, which is why this story from Kafka reminds me of him. He genuinely touched people around him and changed their lives for the better.

He is gone physically, but his love will return to us all in how we live out our lives remembering him, honoring him, and being that person that listens and shares leaving us all with a smile better for the time we were with him.

“ Kevin, you were a light in a sometimes dim world. You were a kind and gentle soul who connected with everyone around you. I always related to your disarming sense of humor and was always glad when we had our opportunities to gather as family. Words cannot express our sense of loss and the shock of your untimely departure from our world. But I know you lived your life without regrets and that you are now in the company of those who also loved you and have passed before you. Yours was a life well lived. Peace, my nephew, and watch over and comfort those of us who miss you so dearly.

“ I remember when you used to play tuba! You were really good at it! I miss you tons and I know you know this. You are my best and closest friend. You are the only person who ever knew the real me and loved every bit of it without ever trying to change me. I still can't really believe you're gone... We've gone through a ton of ups and downs together, but we never loved each other any less. You were a great man. Always kept people smiling. I just wish you were still here.....

I love you, Kev....

“ Kevin it's still so hard to believe you're gone. Didn't matter what the situation you always knew how to make me laugh I will miss you and your amazing sense of humor. You were an amazing guy with a smile that lit up the room. My thoughts and prayers are with your family. Fly high

“ I still can't believe you're gone man. Woke up today and the reality of it hit me again. Seems like that's something I'll carry forever. I've been going through a range of emotions now that the initial shock has started to fade. Dealing with a lot of grief, not just from your loss but also the way I let our relationship get. I feel I pushed you away because I was always so hard on you. That's something I'll always regret. I don't know if it was because of the difference in our ages or what exactly but I realize now I fell into a parental role more often than I should have. I looked at it from wanting you to "do better" because I knew what you were capable of. I didn't want you to struggle with some of the things I have. But after seeing the way you affected so many people's lives the past two days, I realize you had it right the whole time. I wish I'd been able to see that and taken advantage while I had the chance. I wish I'd told you how proud of you I am. This hurts so bad bro. Just know I love you

“ I love the Flory family like I do my own.

I remember meeting Kevin when I went home with his sister Brittany after school. Brittany was a freshman in high school, and Kevin was a silly little bratty brother. Even when he drove us crazy, you knew that he was a sweet kid.

When I saw him again many years later, it shocked me to see him all grown up. Not so bratty anymore, but he still had such a teasing, fun nature about him. Kevin was always silly and sweet, and that is something I'm going to miss.

Mama and Papa Flory, Brittsy, and Jason--I am so sorry for Kevin's passing. I know how much you love him and how much he loved you all. Please know I am praying for you and that my heart is with you all as you grieve his loss.
